

Transformative Story Telling
International Social Pedagogy
Workshop 2019

Wednesday 27th March 2019
1.30 – 4.30pm
Queens University
Peter Froggatt Centre, room 03/017

We are delighted to invite you to our annual social pedagogy event organised jointly by the Social Work departments of Queens University, Ulster University and Oslo Metropolitan University, Norway. This year we will be exploring the transformative potential of storytelling. Everyone has stories to tell - of ordinary, and some extraordinary experiences. In this interactive workshop we will find out how storytelling has the potential to bring new perspectives, facilitate change, and build relationships based on shared humanity. We will reflect on how we might incorporate stories into our work to promote more empowering practice. Friends from Belfast and Oslo will introduce us to a variety of skills for sharing our own stories and helping others to tell theirs:

Jan Støro – Oslo Met – using film in teaching
Elisabeth Grønning – Oslo Met - telling stories through puppetry
Svein Fuglestad - Oslo Met - telling stories through music
Montse Fargas - Queens University Belfast – tenx9 storytelling with care experienced young people

This event is free but places are limited so please register via Eventbrite by clicking on this link:
<https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/transformative-story-telling-international-social-pedagogy-workshop-2019-tickets-56898353507>