Research Interests

Dr M. Satish Kumar is a globally recognised interdisciplinary scholar whose research is grounded in the field of colonial, postcolonial and decolonial geographies of South Asia with a close affinity to social sciences and humanities promoting SDGs. His research has three specific strands. The first strand of research was focused primarily on regional and urban development, issues with a particular focus on sectoral labour market analysis including an evaluation of economic policy impacts across the sector.

The second strand of research advanced questions about the impact of climate change on cultural heritage in fragile ecological zones of Assam. In particular, the role of heritage in the promotion of zero carbon footprints as a key initiative led over the last five years. This focused on decarbonisation and raising awareness against single-use plastics in fragile ecological zones and understanding the significance of traditional ecological knowledge systems in the indigenous communities towards strengthening innate resilience in the wake of climate change.

The third strand of research is the identification of the historical roots of underdevelopment and the significance of the unfinished project of decolonisation in India and globally. This is focused on unpacking the production and mapping of colonial spaces in India and an exploration of racialised, gendered and class-based subjectivities and the negotiations and conflicts around spatial idioms and symbols across the late 16th to 19th century. The most recent work covers the role of missionaries in the production of knowledge across distinct cultural systems.

Governments, charities and other organisations widely seek his knowledge and expertise and he has been an active advisor on subjects such as international and Indigenous development and higher education to the mapping of SDGs in local and global economies, to support for Ethnic Minorities in Northern Ireland, the Department for International Development, Northern Irish Assembly, Indian Government, Royal Irish Academy, Belfast City Council, Habitat for Humanity amongst others.

Dr Kumar's research and teaching expertise and leadership have been recognised internationally and nationally through key measures of esteem namely, recent appointments as the Chairperson of the Kerala Urban Policy Commission; Distinguished Honorary Chair of Global Sustainable Development Goals-India; Membership of ICOMOS/India and being selected to participate in the prestigious G20-C20 Summit in India. He contributes as a Panel Member of the UKRI/AHRC Peer Review College, UK for DCMS, DFG and COP26 funding initiatives. He helped in the establishment of Future Earth Ireland under the aegis of RIA as a founder member.

He has also held a number of Visiting Professorships at Banaras Hindu University, Varanasi; Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi and the University of Calcutta, Kolkata.

Dr Kumar's valued contributions to international research and teaching have been recognised through a number of awards:

- Bhoovigyan (Earth Scientist) National Leadership Award by the late Bhairon Singh Shekhawat, Vice President of India for contributions to Population, Environment & Development Studies. India (2002).

- The India- European Union Global Peace and Friendship Award, 2001 for promoting international peace and understanding based on the values of Peace, Education and Culture over the past twenty years in the communities in India and the UK, (2003).

- Queen's University Teaching Award (2014) as nominated by the students out of 1175 academic staff.

- Nominated by Queen's University for the National (UK) Teaching Award, 2016

- Shortlisted for Queen's University Belfast Vice Chancellor's Research Impact Award, 2018.

- Belfast Ambassador's Award for standout contribution to UK-India relations, 2020. <https://daro.qub.ac.uk/Dr-Satish-Kumar-Belfast-Ambassador-Medal>

Dr Kumar brings a critical, Southern Asian perspective on diversity, gender and age into the engagement remit. Inclusivity and a diversity of experience across disciplinary boundaries help reinforce impact and add tremendous value for UKRI-led research initiatives across the global South. Evidence for his approach can be seen in his much-admired work in the local Northern Ireland context where he has been very active in establishing and participating in a number of initiatives to promote engagement and cross-cultural understanding. For example:

- Established the Young Civic Leaders of Northern Ireland (2014) programme to encourage young people in Northern Ireland to engage in their local communities and make civic contributions.

- Chair, BAME Mental Health, Counselling All Nations Services (CANS), Northern Ireland, Feb 2023

- Chair of the Board of Directors for ArtsEkta, Northern Ireland's leading Intercultural Ethnic Arts and Cultural Organisation (2013-15), promoting intercultural dialogue.

- Organised several interactive workshops on themes of global citizenship and peace for school children in Northern Ireland as part of work supporting the development of educational initiatives in the region, especially among marginal communities.
